CHARLES M. KERNS

In Memoriam.

Howard Rogers, son and only child of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace B. Rogers, of Hillsboro, Ohio, departed this life on Wednesday, July 23, 1913, at the age of 18 years.

He was an alumnus of the Hillsboro High School, being a graduate of the class of 1913 in which he was justly popular. He was a member of the First Presbyterian Church of this place, and was religiously interested in the church life and in the Sabbath School, and was held in high esteem by his pastor and its members.

Four weeks ago yesterday, in company with Willard Wilson, these two young men desiring to spend a portion of their summer's vacation at work on a steam boat, and thus in a way, get some of such experiences as the lakes afford, and at the same time working their way, started for Cleveland and there secured employment on a line of lake steamers traversing the Northern lakes; since which time and until the death of Howard, they were thus still employed. They made one round trip to Chicago and Escanaba, and returned back to Buffalo and Cleveland, and had started on a second trip, by a different steamer, when on Wednesday morning at Ashtabula Harbor on the Steamer J. C. Wallace, Howard met his untimely fate.

Up until this tragic and deplorable accident, the two boys, who had always been friends but had thus become more closely attached by reason of their new environment, were enjoying the lakes and their new life to the fullest extent, as their frequent letters to their parents and friends clearly express. Until this time, their experience bade fair to become one of the most pleasant of a lifetime, for young men who are not afraid of work, and who have a desire to see life as it really is on our great northern lakes.

In the sudden and tragic departure of this young life, it may be well said, that again, "death chose a shining mark," and that the human mind with its frailties, is once more unable to understand the workings of the Divine hand which called him from earth while he was yet developing into young and vigorous manhood. In young active physical manhood, in mental attainments and aspirations, in moral and religious character, Howard was one of Hillsboro's choicest young men. During his High School career he was fond of, and excelled in the athletic sports which appeal to the young and active.

In his classes and as a graduate, he stood favorably and well. He had the ambition to procure a higher education and to this end had planned and expected to enter college the coming fall. His moral and christian character can best be told by reference to his clean habits, and to his pure and upright life which was an open book to be read by all who knew him, and which was indelibly written in his cheerful and open countenance. His christian character and love of the Master's teachings, and of the more serious things in life, was since his death, again revealed to his fond and loving parents when his mother but yesterday, found in his dress coat pocket, which he had with him on this trip, a leaflet of the church services of The First Presbyterian Church of Cleveland, (known as the "Old Stone Church"), where he attended worship on his last Sabbath day on earth.

Howard was a manly fellow, in appearance and demeanor beyond one of his years. Nature had kindly endowed him with physical strength and comely appearance; with a mental make-up that was pleasing and entertaining; and above all, had graciously blessed him with a beautiful soul that made him liked by old and young, a soul that made him, when away among strangers, in a strange place, and in a large city, to spend a portion of the Sabbath day in God's house, in that historic "Old Stone Church." And it was this same God given spirit that led him to attempt to do an act of kindness, and lend a helping hand to a fellow man, yes to a stranger, that cost him his life. It was this spirit of unselfishness of which it was said

"Fading away like the stars of the morning, Losing their light in the storied sun— Thus would we pass from the earth and its toiling, Only remembered by what we have done. Oh, when the Savior shall make up His jewels, When the bright crowns of rejoicing are won, Then shall His weary and faithful disciples, All be remembered by what they have done."

When we look upon the incident of this occasion, and when we realize the suddenness with which this young life has been cut off without even a chance to say good by, we can but bow in grief, and drop a tear on the Divine promise which says—

"And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away."

CHAUTAUQUA TALENT

Sidney Landon has the reputation of being unexcelled as a delineator of characters. Wherever he has been he has delighted his audiences. His versatility and talent can best be appreciated when it is known that he gives artistic character sketches of such entirely different men as Mark Twain, Edgar Allen Poe, Longfellow, Kipling, Bill Nye, Tennyson and many others.

When a man of wide reputation and marked ability of Rev. Frank W. Gunsaulus, of Chicago, Ill., will give the following endorsement of a speaker, he must be well worth hearing:

"I have just engaged George Stuart for the fifteen hundred young men at Armour Institute. He will delight them. I heard him three times and I feel that I have made the discovery of a really great master of assemblies. I laughed until I was on the verge of collapse; then I was rescued by a wise remark worthy of a philosopher. I wept like a child as he led me through scenes of boyish delight or sympathy. Then he lifted me to heights of moral vision which I hope may never forsake. Great is the mission of humor; great is the cleansing power of tears which are without regret; great is the realm of the noble life and George Stuart has a passport to them all."

The "Koney's Boys" Concert Company is probably the most unique musical organization in the country. It is the most popular musical attraction on the Chautauqua circuits. They have given over 5,000 concerts to more than 2,000,000 delighted listeners. They were honored by being invited to give a Christmas concert at the White House during the administration of President Roosevelt.

The Dunbars Singing Orchestra is composed of talented young ladies. They give a program of both instrumental and vocal music.

Another high class musical attraction is the Hussars. The favor with which they have met wherever they have appeared is shown by the following clipping from the Milford, Del., Chronicle:

"The Hussars were far above the general average of musical entertainments. Nine young men, all artists, Songs, instrumental music and readings. Supt. Hardesty gave the people a musical treat which does not come this way every day. It is to be hoped they will be here again."

Everyone who enjoys jubilee singing anticipates a great treat to the original Carolinian Jubilee Singers. Here is what the Pueblo, Colo., Chieftian, said of them:

"The Original Carolinian Jubilee Singers were greeted by a fair sized house at the Grand last night and those who are fond of singing were well pleased. In rendering the 'before the war' negro songs of the south they made a hit and were forced to respond to encore on almost every number."

Prices Premier Band, of Greenfield, which closes the Chautauqua on Sunday night with a grand concert is an organization of which the people of Highland county are justly proud. It compares favorably with the best bands of the large cities and always delights lovers of band music.

With a program of such exceptional merit, with such beautiful grounds and ideal surroundings in which to enjoy the good things prepared, the very reasonable price of only a $1.75 for season tickets every one should arrange to attend the Hillsboro Chautauqua. The solicitors are now calling on the people and report excellent sales. Everywhere the Chautauqua spirit is growing and Hillsboro will undoubtedly be no exception.

A Surprise Party.
